Pro Bono Legal Advice

SO YOU WANT TO MOUNT YOUR OWN SUPREME COURT ACTION!

I wouldn't even bother trying this; it's very complicated and requires the use of a B-notch pin and some raw plugs. Leave it to the professionals, I say.

At Welcher & Welcher we are those professionals. We have studied very hard at Law School and at great cost to our parents and know all manner of legal type things. And if it so happens that none of us studied the area of law you need some help in (like Simony or Replevin, for example) then that's where our excellent research skills kick in. A quick intra-office e-mail to our librarian and she'll be off her arse and into the tomes faster than you can say 'Jesus, they sent me an account already'. She's pretty good too.

The Dewey Decimal system holds no mystery for this little shiksa. Admiral Dewey certainly has a lot to answer for. How he managed to become the hero of Manila that he undeniably is and invent an exceptionally convenient method for cataloguing books is beyond me. The man's a genius. I barely have time to tie my own shoelaces in the morning. I'm running for the bus with a coffee in one hand and an unread brief in the other, covered in stains - already late no doubt for a court appearance - no trousers on probably, oh it's a complete disaster most of the time. I weep a lot.

There's stuff everywhere in my office; piles of unanswered correspondence, letters of demand from leasing agencies, pools of urine - I only went into this profession to please my parents. My secret fantasy is to be able to fly. Free as an archaeopteryx, except capable of flight. Soaring high across the trees and mountains, cawing loudly. THAT'S THE LIFE FOR ME. None of this sitting about at a desk caper. What did they eat I wonder, archyoptri? Some sort of prehistoric seed I guess. I bet it was yummy.
